Baby's Drawer.

There's a little drawer in my chamber, Guarded with tender care, Where the dainty clothes are lying That my darling shall never wear; And there, while the hours are waning, Till the house is all at rest. Isit, and fancy a baby Close to my aching breast.

My darling's pretty white garments, I wrought them while sitting apart, While his mystic life was throbbing Under my throbbing heart; And often my happy dreaming Breaks in a little song, Like the murmur of birds at breeding, When the days are warm and long.

I finished the dainty wardrobe, And the drawer was almost full With robes of the finest muslin. And robes of the whitest wool. I folded them all together, With a rose for every pair, Smiling, and saying, "Grow fragrant, Fit for my prince to wear." Ah! the radiant Summer morning. So full of a mother's joy ! "Thank God! he is fair and perfect. My beautiful new-born boy."

Let him wear the pretty white garments I wrought while sitting apart-Lay him, so sweet and helpless. There, close to my throbbing heart,

Many and many an evening I sit since my baby came, Saying, "What do the angels call him?" For he died without a name; Sit while the hours are waning, And the house is all at rest, And fancy a baby nestling Close to my aching breast.

> my first call with her. made me ashamed. Was this to continue? was life to be spoiled so? I knew that Aunt Murdock had spoken truly live for though one should never take upon herself the name of wife. And many true women were walking the earth | for a short time. alone, patiently bearing their burdens, and finding the way flower-strewn and sunny, as much as any can. Could I not be thus courageous also? And who could find more to live for and enjoy than I?

Aside from the dear parents and brothers whom I could help and who helped me, the many friends I loved and found loving, there was a career already begun, a height to reach.

I had been successful in music beyone most who receive like advantages. The voice my Maker gave me was agreat and precious gift-I could say it truthfully and without pride. It had power and sweetness, and much as it had learned to do, would yet be able to accomplish far more. My fingers were already skillful, in the future they should be better skilled; I had mastered something of the first-class Corn Shellers, whereby you science of harmony, I would go to its depths and learn the meaning of all music. I would also study other sounds of earth, its hoarse discords, chromatic jars, 6th. It was plain that I was to sing 8th. All our work is wARRANsolos, but if I could make them clear and sweet, if I could reach the high notes and dwell there with unbroken voice, singing soft and strong although so high, and

I made this resolution on one of those nountains of transfiguration which we all ometimes ascend, with a valley just beond, but it was made deliberately, and ver since I have striven more or less arnestly to to keep it. But if it has een kept, if I have always sung, there ave been minor strains and many that vere sadly discordant.

Music was a source of revenue to me only in teaching, and I seldom sang or payed in public except in church. Havig acquired some reputation as a vocalas a tempting offer had come from a chrch in a neighboring city to make me one of its choir on a good salary, but mover thought it not wise for me to accet. My gifts however were frequenly clled into requisition in private. I wasmuch sought, often invited out oftener, t is to be feared, because I could so easy help to entertain, than because of peronal worth or from motives of friendshb. The fear that this would be the cas was an incentive to more thorough general culture, careful attention to the lenands of society, and endeavors to make myself pleasing and worthy to plese, for I wished to be esteemed rather br what I was than for what I could do. I had therefore no lack of attention, and gossips were wondering why Charity Boson did not marry, and saying that she would go through the woods and pick up a crooked stick at last.

In accordance with my resolution, the love of Robert was put away, buried, and I dared to meet him when Mary ane. She wanted to go to him on the same evening of her arrival, so soon that it memed a good deal like using our house as a hotel and as though the visit was not to me but to him. Mrs. Summerland net us with great cordiality, complained that I had staid away long, and thanked Mary for being so kind to her son. Robert appeared to feel some embarrassment in meeting me, but glad to see Mary and to have been expecting her. She sat down beside him, examined his arm and talked in a very doctor-like yet pleasant way, when they were interrupted by the coming of Mr. Kingsley and the conversation, becoming general, turned upon Robert's experiences in the army. meeting Robert, for such a meeting might | Mr. Kingsley went away and Robert betray me. They had many visitors at and Mary resumed their conversation, that time and my staying away would not | into which they endeavored to draw us, be noticed, so I delayed until apprised of but which did not greatly interest me, Mary's visit, and then decided to make and I began to be impatient to come away. But the return of Mrs. Beach This necessity led to serious thoughts made me glad to remain a little longer, so of my position which frightened me and that Mary might see and hear her. She was only Mrs. Summerland's tenant, not one of her family, and instead of going directly to her room, as was her custom, when she said that there was much to she took a seat with us. Robert mentioned Tim Woodenhead, who had also been in the hospital under Mary's care

"If that man's got a name why don't ve call him by it ?" said Mrs. Beach. "It would be quite sensible to do so if one could find what it is," he replied. "He appears to like this, however."

"He says so." "Wall, that's a very good Bible name if a body'll live up to it. Where did the nan come from ?" "He would never tell, but claimed to

"You've made a fool of me!" Beach said. "You ain't Timothy Beach at all. You don't look like him. His hair was black and didn't grow all over his face; he had bright eyes and wan't nigh so old."

"Have you looked in the glass lately, ma'am? Your hair was pretty dark then but if I see right"—he went to her and examined her hair-"there's whitish streaks in it now. I expect about the same time has gone by since I went away as since you sent me off. Time has got wings, ma'am, and he flies. He's got a sickle and is slowly cuttin' on us down, ma'am. But you hold your age remarkably well. I should ha' known you anywhere. There's the same bright eyes lighted up with soul, ma'am, the same benevolent expression.

"Now, Timothy, don't talk nonsense." "It's no nonsense, ma'am, I'm speakin' my convictions."

"Wall, I do believe 'tis you. That's jest your way of makin' folks believe what they've no business to. If you Providence helps those only who help hadn't such a kind o' persuasive way you and I never'd had all this trouble. Wall I'll see. I'll take advice. I'm all jumbled up now. Miss Summerland, I'll fix my bed, and you jest put Timothy in it to sleep to night, and I'll run over to Miss Doolittle's and lie on her lounge."

"That is quite unnecessary, Ann. We have beds enough." "But this my company, not yourn, and and I want my way. He's been travelin'

Still, he would never, to the end of time, dream of what you are dying of. So accept my advice and take the matter in hand yourself .- To Day.

Quilts and Counterpanes.

The warmest, lightest, best, and consequently the most expensive bed covering is an eider-down quilt, made of the best down put into a silken covering. A number of cotton counterpanes piled one on the other would fatigue the sleeper, and not impart a tithe of the warmth of down or sheep's wool. It is a mistake to imagine that a pile of clothes will impart heat. Warmth is produced in the human body, and the object should be to retain that heat, by adopting such clothes as will, with a due regard to ventilation, prevent much of it from escaping. Sheep's wool, either as blankets, flannel, or woolen damask, will do this; also feathers, down and furs. The next counterpane to notice is the Massilian quilt, sometimes termed Marseilles and Marcella. These on the surface, are made in imitation of the old-fashioned quilting of old blankets between chintz and white linen, which were formerly so prized. These Masillian quilts are comfortable, light and elegant. Servants colored cotton quilts, if of tolerable quality, are both soft and warm. They are not so finely woven as others, and the material being less dressed in the manufacture, is more fluffy and warmer. Sup posing that economy is strictly necessary, and that a quilt, however poor, cannot be purchased, warmth in bed may be obtained by lining a sheet or other calico paper, first well crumpled and rubbed to render it soft. The warmth this duces is almost incredible, because it does -Cassell's Household Guide.

> FRENCH MUSTARD.—Slice up an onion in a bowl; cover with good vinegar; leave two or three days; pour off vine gar into a basin; put into it one teaspoonful of pepper, one of salt, one ta-blespoonful of brown sugar, and mustard enough to thicken; smooth the mustard for vinegar as you would flour for gravy; mix all together; set on the stove and stir until it boils, when remove and use

> BREAKFAST ROLLS .- At night take 1 pint sweet-milk, lukewarm, 2 eggs, butter size of a walnut, 3 tablespoons yeast, flour enough to make it the consistency of biscuit dough; let it stand until morning, then roll thin as for biscuit; cut in circles about four inches in diameter; butter the surface, and fold together; when the rolls are quite light bake them in a quick oven.

SNOW CAKE. - Sift one tumblerful of powdered sugar into a cake dish, fill a tumbler two-thirds full of the finest flour, in which has been rubbed a pinch of salt, one teaspoonful cream of tartar; fill the remainder of the tumbler with corn starch, and mix thoroughly; then add the whites of ten eggs beaten until they will stand on an inverted platter; use colorless extract for flavoring, and bake in a rather slow oven.

-Hearth and Home.

An impulsive young man sent his girl the piece of sheet music entitled, "I will meet you at the beautiful gate. Her father saw the piece when she opened the package, and after daubing a bucketful of tar over his gate, quietly remarked to his daughter, "He can wait for you if he wants to, but you won't either of you swing on that gate if tar will keep you off."

To any young lady bored with a superfluity of calls, we recommend the following method of getting rid of her too numerous admirers: Keep on hand a supply of tickets for fancy fairs and charitable concerts, and offer a few to every man who comes to see you. The effect will be surprising.

Lawyers' Duties to Clients and People.

Prof Theodore W. Dwight, of Clinton in his remarks to the graduating class of Columbia College Law School last week, uttered sentiments eminently sensible and worthy the consideration of most legal gentlemen. He said: I wish to point out to you some of the duties which all lawyers owe to society and to the State. The duties of the lawyer to his client are not of first importance. The idea, sometimes so general in the profession, that a client may demand everything, even the sacrifice of honor, from the counsel, is not sound. The sanction which Lord Brougham was alleged to have given it, it has now lost, for that famous threat with which Brougham sought to force his King into doing his wronged wife justice only meant that even the public welfare was of less account than the truth. When, therefore, a lawyer's obligations to his client clash with his obligations to society, the client and not society must give way. It is in making and interpreting legislation that the profession exerts most influence upon the State-may do it the greatest injury or secure it the greatest good. This is a work which only legal training can fit man successfully to perform, and it is a work which offers to able and corrupt men peculiar temptation and peculiar

The designate this natural specime composant, a have named it

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

The term, however, is but a feeble expression of my most matured appreciation of its value, based upon actual and witnessed realities. As a close observer, I have while witnessing its positive results in the few special diseases incident to the separate organism of woman, singled it out as the climas or crowning gem of my medical enterer. On its merits as a positive, safe and effectual remedy for this class of diseases, and one that will at all times and under all chemistances act kindly and in harmony with the laws which govern the female system, I am willing to stake my reputation as a physician. Nay, even more, so confident am I that it will not disappoint the mestsanguine expectations of a single invalid lady who employs it for any of the ailments for which I recommend it, that I offer and sell it under A POSTIVE GUARANTEE. If a beneficial effect is not experienced by the time two-thirds of the contents of the bottle are used, I will, on return of the bottle, two-thirds of the medicine having been taken according to directions, and the case being one for which I recommend it, promptly refund the money paid for it. Had I not the most perfect confidence in its virtues, I could not offer it as I do under these conditions; but having witnessed its truly miraculous cures in thousands of cases, I feel warranted and perfectly safe in risking both my reputation and my money on its merits.

The following are among those diseases in which my Favorite Prescription has worked cures—aif by magic and with a certainty never before at tained by any medicine; Leucornhoa, Excessive Flowing, Painful Monthly Periods, Suppression, Internal Heat, Nervous Depression, Deblity, Despendency, Threatened Miscarriage, Chronic Congestion, Inflammation and Ulceration of the Uterus, Anteversion and Retroversion, Bearing Down Bensation, Internal Heat, Nervous Depression, Deblity, Despendency, Threatened Miscarriage, Chronic Congestion, Infla disappointment, without even a hope of resurrection, that well known and venerable institution, the Mexico Lounging Club, resulting from the marriage of its youthful president. Notwithstanding the Club all knew of their president's gallantry, his admiration, love and respect for the fair sex, they were altogether unprepared to learn that Cupid had been playing such mischief with his tender susceptibilities, and that their beloved president would succumb to and fall beneath his unerring shaft; that unbeknown to any other member of the Club, he should so far forget or ignore his official obligations to its members as Wholesale Prices. to commit matrimony, and without one word of apology, or apparent consci-entious scrupte, annihilate an organization of so much importance, is certainly strange even in modern laxity of moral principle. But in this it will be readily seen that the unfortunate, rejected treasurer has his revenge upon the Club. They are no more. It would certainly seem that with ordinary foresight the Club should have discovered the propensity or predilection of their presiwould-be treasurer, who could and would have saved them in their hour of need. Nevertheless, its dispersed and sorrowing members, together with its rejected treasurer, send their most heartfelt congratulations both to bridegroom and bride, with many good wishes that a happy and perpetual honeymoon may be theirs. It only remains for Uncle O. and Uncle Miah, - F., and others, to restrain all undue hopes of matrimonial happiness, and reconcile themselves, as best they may, to the loss of their Club organization and the absence

A family on Steuben street have almost concluded to do their own work .--They did feel like hiring a domestic, but when a girl came to make inquiries about the place, they got almost discouraged. The following questions were actually asked by one applicant:

Do you want a girl? How much do you give? How many are there in the family?

How many ladies? How many gentlemen? Is the washing large?

How many shirts are there in the Do you have many white dresses in the wash?

Do you have gas in the kitchen? Is it a basement kitchen? Is there water in the kitchen? Is there a sink in the kitchen?

Can I go to church twice on Sunday

Why did your last girl leave? Does the lady of the house attend to the rest of the housework on washing and ironing days!

Will I have to wait on the table Are there many children? Does the lady of the house do the fine ooking? We believe the girl was not engaged and of course there has been a great deal of laugh over these questions, and yet the girl may have been wise. No business man would think of making an engagement until he knew definitely as to its every feature. We believe the girl who carefully satisfied herself as to what she was expected to do would be likely As Mr. W. H. "Racy, brilliant, piquant, full of keen observation and pungent statement of facts, picturesque in delineation of scenes on the plains, in the mountains, and along the sea. The late William H. Seward characterized her account of Mormons and Mormonism, included in this book, as the most graphic and trustworthy he had ever read. It is a book full of delightful reading all the way through, and, like a nut, has many a choice morsel tucked away in sly corners for those who find them."—Boston Globe.

Resignation of Mr. John Carlin.

As stated in our last issue, we publish this week Mr. Carlin's letter, tendering his resignation of the office of President of the Nat. C. M. Union, accompanied by practical suggestions with regard to amendments to the Constitution, propositions for deciding on the different natures of memorials with the respective required amounts therefor, the locations for their erection, &c. We agree with Mr. Carlin that the clause in Article II, section 5, should be repealed at once, and that the proposed amendment to section 6, in the same article, should be

MORTGAGE SALE.—Whereas default has III been made in the payment of the money secured by Mortgage dated February 17, 1872, executed by James P. Lamoree, of Mexico, Oswego Co., N. Y., to Ebenezer E. Menter, of the same place, which mortgage with the power of sale contained therein was recorded in Oswego Co. Clerk's office, Feb. 20, 1872, at 2½ o'clock p. m., in Liber 93 of mortgages, page 514. And whereas said Menter is now the lawful owner and holder thereof, and the amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice is $100 of said principal, and $84 accrued interest, and to become due the further sum of $1,110.91, making the whole sum unpaid upon said mortgage, at this date $1,294.91. And no proceedings have been had at law to recover the same or any part thereof. Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and duly recorded as aforesaid, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, at the law office of Skinner & Wright, in Mexico, N. In a New York paper I read an account of the arrest of this impostor, who it seems has been imposing upon the public, and I beg to say a few words for the benefit of the public, as well as to defend that class of persons who have the misfortune to be deprived of the powers of hearing and speech. In the first place, while it is bad enough for a totally uneducated deaf-mute to ask for pecuniary aid from the public, it strikes me as being a piece of brazen impudence for a well educated deaf-mute, and well enough educated to be a lawyer too, to solicit alms of the public. In the second place, it is evident that the public has an extraordinary amount of pity for deaf mutes, judging from the prominent fact that this lawyer, who has been playing deaf-mute, cleared on an average

I have no doubt that those who have extended aid to Kendall were fired with indignation when they read the account of his arrest. I cannot say that I sympatize with them, for if they have so mean an opinion of the deaf-mutes as to suppose that a genuine well-educated deafnute will ever stoop so low as to ask for alms of the public, they richly deserve to be imposed upon, and I do not pity them; not I! An able bodied deaf-mute has no better excuse for asking for alms than the stalwart beggar, who, on being asked why he did not work and earn money, replied, "Oh! If you only knew how lazy I am!" The man who would give money to this lazy beggar, has no
